As Cambridge resident Tip O'Neill famously said, "All politics is local." The Cambridge Bicycle Committee and the Cambridge Historical Society will take interested cyclists on a 10-plus mile ride through the city highlighting events associated with national movements that had Cambridge local political roots, starting with the American Revolution and including the temperance movement, anti-war protests, up to late twentieth century campaigns for controlled development. At several stops along the way guest speakers will present brief theme-related talks. The ride culminates at Lechmere Canal Park with a free snack. Afterwards, those interested will be escorted back to the start.
