If Boston was the Athens of America in the nineteenth century, then Cambridge and Harvard were the Acropolis and Parthenon. Poets, novelists, and non-fiction writers have lived in and written about the “new towne” for over 350 years. Anne Bradstreet, Margaret Rey, e.e. cummings, Vladimir Nabokov, T.S. Eliot, Robert Frost, and scores more have called Cambridge home. And Cambridge figures in the story line of dozens of books and poems including Sound and the Fury, Professor Romeo, The Dante Club, and many more.
